In India no one section of the community seems to miss an opportunity to go on strike. Almost everyday we read in the newspapers of someone or the other going on strike, quite often for the flimsiest reason one can imagine.

Strike is a legitimate weapon of the worker to get better pay, shorter hours of work and better working conditions when all the other methods have failed. But to resort to strike because some action has been taken on an erring colleague or because, some headstrong subordinate was not treated with respect, is meaningless. Unfortunately in India the tendency to go on strike seems to be widespread not only among workers but also among others. The taxi drivers go on strike if the police asks them to fix meters. Students go on strike because they feel the question is too stiff for them to answer. Slum-dwellers go on strike because they have been asked to move into new tenements built for them.

Strikers are the last to realize that they are the ultimate losers in most cases. Their gains are only apparent. Increased wages may not benefit them unless they are related to increased productivity. When an employer is forced to increase his workers' wages, without a corresponding increase in production, as is most often the case, his cost of production goes up and this in turn increases the price of his product. So, though the worker may get more, he will have to spend more to get his minimum requirements, and this is what is happening today.

Imagine you are Chandini Saldhana. Write a letter to the editor of a daily, drawing his attention to lack of security in the railway station/airport of your town/city.

15. Read the following passage and answer the questions set on it:

I was the last child of a small-time government servant, in a family of five brothers. My earliest memory of my father is as that of a district employment officer in Koraput, Orissa. There was no electricity; no primary school nearby and water did not flow out of a tap. As a result, I did not go to school until the age of eight; I was home-schooled.

Over the many intervening years, I grew up, studied, and began my life as a clerk in a government office, went on to become a management trainee with the DCM group, and eventually found my life’s calling with the IT industry when fourth generation computers came to India in 1981. I worked with outstanding people, had challenging assignments and travelled all over the world.

In 1992, while I was posted in the US, I learnt that my father, living a retired life with my eldest brother, had suffered a third-degree burn injury and was admitted in Safdarjung Hospital in Delhi. I flew back to attend to him. He remained for a few days in a critical stage, bandaged from neck to toe.

Safdarjung Hospital is a dirty, cockroach-infested, inhuman place. The overworked nurses in the burns ward are both victims and perpetrators of dehumanized life at its worst. One morning, while attending to my father, I realized that the blood bottle was empty, and fearing that air would go into his vein, I asked the nurse to change it. She bluntly told me to do it myself. In that horrible theatre of death, I was in pain. I was frustrated and angry. Finally when the nurse relented and came, my father opened his eyes and murmured to her, “Why have you not gone home yet?”. Here was a man on his deathbed, more concerned about the overworked nurse than his own state! I was stunned. I learnt that there is no limit to how concerned you can be for another human being. Father died the next day. [Excerpt from ‘My Story’ by Subroto Bagchi]
(a) Answer the following questions in a sentence each:
